

The Hobbit Game Manual

Goal of the game

The purpose of the game is best described by the opening message displayed to the player:

“Welcome to Middle-Earth

You are Bilbo Baggins, a hobbit, and you are on a quest with a company of dwarves to reclaim their homeland on Erebor, also known as the Lonely Mountain. Unfortunately, you have lost the company of dwarves. You are currently on a hilly field in Dunland. As Bilbo Baggins, you know the following things: the dwarves will meet atop the Lonely Mountain at the last light of Durin’s day, which is in 32 days. It is your goal to join them.”

In other words, it is your goal to reach Erebor in time.

Most common commands

The following commands allow you to interact with the locations, items and characters in the game.

‘travel north/east/south/west’: allows you to travel north/east/south/west. Each time you travel, it costs you a day.

‘look’: allows you to look around and get a description of your current location.

‘look north/east/south/west’: allows you to get an estimation of what lies ahead to the north/east/south/west.

‘pick up <item>’: allows you to pick up an item.

‘examine <item>’: allows you to examine an item.

‘talk to <character>’: allows you to talk to a character.

‘inventory’: displays a list of the items you currently have in inventory.

‘help’: displays a help message with information on the game.

‘help directions’: displays what directions you can travel in from your current location.

Special commands (only look through these when you’re stuck)

The following commands allow you to interact with particular locations/items/characters in a special way. Of course, it is part of the fun of the game to guess these. This is why we only recommend you to look through these when you’re really stuck.
